FISHING FOR WATER.

Cold Springs at the Sea Bottom That Supply the People of Bahrin.

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION.

Synopsis of a Lecture on the Somewhat Mysterious Subject.

(Chicago Times)

The association of fire engineers and fire underwriters of the northwest at ... the lecture delivered by Professor John M. Ordway, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on the subject of "Spontaneous Combustion." Professor Ordway began by stating that when flint strikes steel sparks of fire glow for an instant and vanish. If the tiny particles fall on dry tinder or gunpowder there is something more than a transient light ... civilized man from the earliest ages to the second third of our century had been wont to summon fire from cold dead matter. Jupiter hid fire in the veins of flint but had Virgil ever seen the roaring charcoal heaps where ... the Chalybes of his time reduced their ores he might have guessed more wisely and thought that flint only draws out the fire stored up in the hardest product of the forge, the child of fire.

At first thought it might seem that sparks produced by violent concussion have little connection with the flames which sometimes burst out suddenly from a quiet motionless mass of matter, yet the experiment of the tinder box may well serve to throw some light on spontaneous combustion. Heat may be produced by friction, by concussion, or by tearing apart the particles of the solid substance as well as by chemical reaction. The heat of friction is trifling compared with combustion. Warmth generally increases the tendency to combustion. The most common cases of spontaneous combustion are those of animal or vegetable oils. Cotton seed oil was the most dangerous. Waste baskets should be replaced by iron baskets with iron covers so as to check the flames. There is no good reason for thinking that dampness increased chances for spontaneous combustion. Sawdust soaked with tallow or oil may cause spontaneous combustion. If lighted matches and cigar ends were not thrown so carelessly away, we might not have so many cases of spontaneous combustion. The heavier petroleum oils mixed with animal and vegetable oils are preferable for lubrication.

Stories of inebriates who collapsed from spontaneous combustion were merely theoretical. The statement that drunkards have gone up by spontaneous combustion is no longer believed. Modern chemistry can not explain how they could be so affected. If more care was exercised in the selection of porters, janitors, etc., who would not succumb to the evils of the tempter there would be fewer fires caused by spontaneous combustion. Essential or volatile oils are not as oxidizable as other oils. It is possible, though, for these to cause spontaneous combustion. Another cause from which spontaneous combustion frequently resulted was dyed textile fabrics. These dyes in many cases take up oxygen, and as a result when the fabrics are lying in heaps spontaneous combustion follows. For instance, many black silks are dyed, and when they are being dried they not infrequently burned. Black silks, then, should not be packed at the bottom of deep trunks. Dyed cotton goods are not as liable to be destroyed by spontaneous combustion, as the oxidization reaches its limit in a few days. "Safety" matches should be kept in all households, as they are not likely to cause spontaneous combustion.

CHARLES DICKENS' LIFE

Among His Children as Remembered by His Eldest Daughter.

(Book Review)

Charles Dickens' eldest daughter, in her last contribution to The Cornhill Magazine, says:

During the years spent at Tavistock house one of his daughters was for a time a great invalid, and after a worse attack of illness than usual her father suggested that she should be carried as far as the study, and lie on the sofa there while he was at work. This was of course considered an immense privilege and even if she had not felt so weak and ill as she did, she would have been bound to remain as still and quiet as possible. For some time there was no sound to be heard in the room but the rapid working of the pen when suddenly he jumped up, went to the looking glass, rushed back to his writing table, and jotted down a few words, back to the glass again, this time talking to his own reflection, or rather to the simulated expression he saw there, and was trying to catch before drawing it in words, then back again to his writing.

After a little he got up again, and stood with his back to the glass, talking softly and rapidly for a long time, then looking at his daughter, but certainly never seeing her, then once more back to his table, and to steady writing until luncheon time. It was a curious experience and a wonderful thing to see him throwing himself so entirely out of himself and into the character he was writing about. His daughter has very seldom mentioned this incident, feeling as if it would be almost a breach of confidence to do so. But in these reminiscences of her father, she considers it only right that this experience should be mentioned, showing as it does his characteristic earnestness and method of work.

After a hard morning's writing when he has been alone with his family and no visitors in the house, he has come in to luncheon and gone through the meal without uttering a word, and then he has gone back to his work in which he was so completely absorbed. Then again there have been times when his nerves have been strung up to such a high pitch that any sudden noise such as the dropping of a spoon or the clatter of a plate, seemed to cause him real agony. He never could bear the least noise when he was writing, and waged a fierce war against all organ grinders, etc.

In 1856 the purchase of Gad's Hill was made. Charles Dickens had never been inside the house until it was his own. Every year he had some bright idea or some contemplated wonderful improvement to propound to us. And it became quite a joke between him and his youngest daughter—who was constantly at Gad's Hill—as to what the next improvement would be. These additions and alterations gave him endless amusement and delight, and he would watch the growing of each one with the utmost eagerness and impatience. For one "improvement" he had looking glass put into each panel of the dining room door, and showing it to his youngest daughter said with great pride: "Now what do you say to this, Katie?" She laughed and said: "Well, really, papa, I think when you're an angel your wings will be made of looking glass, and your crown of scarlet geraniums."

He loved all flowers but especially bright flowers, and scarlet geraniums were his favorite of all. There were two large beds of these on the front lawn, and when they were fully out, making one scarlet mass, there was blaze enough to satisfy even him. Even in dress he was fond of a great deal of color, and the ... came to his daughter's wedding quite delighted him because it was trimmed with a profusion of cherry colored ribbon. He used constantly to speak about it afterward in terms of the highest admiration.

During the summer months there was a constant succession of visitors at Gad's Hill, with picnics, long drives and much happy holiday making. At these picnics there was a frequent request to the lover of light and color of "Please let us have the luncheon in the shade at any rate." He came to his daughter one day and said he had "a capital idea" about picnic luncheon. He wished each person to have his or her own ration neatly done up in one parcel, to consist of a mutton pie, a hard boiled egg, a roll, a piece of butter, and a packet of salt. Of course this idea was faithfully carried out, but was not always the rule, as when the choice of food was put to the vote, it was found that many people cared neither for mutton pie nor hard-boiled egg. But the "capital idea" of separate rations was always followed as closely as possible.

Pay for "War Articles" Manuscript.

[Boston Transcript]

The original contract called for four articles from Gen. Grant—on Shiloh, Vicksburg, Chattanooga and the Wilderness. The agreed price for these articles was $500 for each, and this is the sum that has been paid. If any one doubts this statement, I can assure him that I have seen Gen. Grant's receipt for this sum for the Shiloh and other articles. The Shiloh paper covers about twenty one pages, more than half of which space is given up to illustrations. Gen. Grant, therefore, according to his contract, received about $50 for each page of the text that he furnished—and I think no one will doubt that he wrote the whole paper. Gen. Joseph E. Johnston and Gen. McClellan, who have written about the Peninsula campaign and Admiral Porter have also received $500 each for articles. Gen. McClellan is an able writer and his papers describing his connection with the army of the Potomac, discuss not only the military side of the question, but his relations with the administration as well, and narrates the details of interviews which he had with President Lincoln and secretary Seward.

Slavery Among Ants.

[Cornhill Magazine.]

The big red ant of southern Europe makes regular slave raids upon the nests of the small brown ants and carries off the young in their pupa condition. By and by the brown ants hatch out in their strange nest, and, never having known any other life except that of slavery, accommodate themselves to it readily enough. The red ant, however, is still only an occasional slave owner, if necessary, he can get along by himself, without the aid of his little brown servants. Indeed there are free states and slave states of red ants side by side with one another, as of old in Maryland and Pennsylvania, in the first the red ants do their work themselves, like mere vulgar Ohio farmers, in the second they get their work done for them by their industrious little brown servants, like the aristocratic first families of Virginia before the earthquake of emancipation.

A Former "Lulu Hurst."

[New Orleans Times-Democrat.]

An old lady in Georgia says Lulu Hurst calls to her mind a girl whom she knew when young, and whose powers were somewhat like Lulu's, but stronger. The strange power came to this ancient Lulu in fits, and when they came on she would leap so high as to make her head touch the ceiling of an ordinary room. When she became quiet and seated, the chairs, tables and such things in the room would begin to dance around until they would get up against the chair in which the girl was seated. She had no control over the power and it only exerted itself at times. Her friends thought her bewitched, and were afraid of her. Whatever the agency may have been the girl dwindled from a robust, healthy person to a wreck when she died.

IN AN ART ACADEMY.

The Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and Its Methods of Teaching.

[Philadelphia Press.]

The student first enters the antique class, where he draws from plaster casts of statues, busts of portions of the human figure, carved originally by the most famous of ancient sculptors. It is not the policy of Thomas Eakins, the director of the school, to keep a pupil longer than is necessary in this department. As soon as the student progresses and shows some adaptation, he is advanced to the life class, where the professor of painting thinks the real work is to be done, as work from nature is considered far more useful than that from a copy of nature, however great. The materials for drawing on paper, too, with the exception of charcoal, do not admit of the strength and rapidity of treatment which are considered important, so that oil paint and clay are the real tools of the school.

The life classes consist of thirty five and forty-five men and women, respectively, who spend their time in painting exclusively from the nude male and female figures. The latter are now very frequently drawn from the ranks of life of considerable respectability, and are almost invariably masked. The remuneration is $12.50 a week for three hours work each day, while the men receive but $9.00 a week. Occasionally prize-fighters, trapeze performers and other athletes are engaged, and excellent opportunity is afforded to study their extraordinary muscular development. Besides the life-painting classes, there are portrait and sketch classes for which members of the classes pose.

It is in accordance with the general theory of Professor Eakins and his assistant, Thomas Anshutz that accurate information should rather be gained than merely the knack of representing something, and that nothing increases the knowledge of the figure more rapidly than modeling it. The figure is seen from all points of view and the action of the muscles is much better determined than from a single point of vantage as when painting. So when they find that a young woman is painting flat, they send her at once to the modeling room where it is impressed upon her that the human body is rounded, and she learns to give the same effect in her painting. A horse has been the subject of composition by both men and women for the past six weeks and has now been replaced by a cow—two animals which probably enter more than any others into the composition of landscape and pictures in general.

Another branch made much of is the study of anatomy, the facilities for which are superior to those of any art school in the world. The cadavers are provided every year and advanced students can dissect for themselves, on the principle that everything should be learned from the original source. To draw the human figure it is claimed it is necessary to know as much as possible about it, about its structure, its movements, its bones and muscles, how they are made and how they act. It is a question among art teachers whether it is advisable to go so deep into an unpleasant subject, whether the horrors of work the will not dull, in a measure, the pure artistic feelings of the student but the teachers and the students themselves are enthusiastic in its favor. Twice a week Dr. W. W. Keen, professor of artistic anatomy, lectures on the subject, illustrating his discourses with the live body, the cadaver and the skeleton. The framework to which the muscles are attached the form and action of the muscles are thus clearly exhibited. The smaller animals are likewise ... horse is made the object of dissection and consequent illustration.

The system of the instruction employed by the teachers is that of occasional criticism only, the pupil being encouraged to see for himself how a thing ought to be done. The academy furnishes the facilities for the prosecution of the study to the best advantage, while the students learn much from their association with each other. The average length of time spent here by students who succeed is about four years, and their ages range from 15 to 50.

Dress of the Old Statesmen.

[San Francisco Argonaut.]

Luke P. Poland is the only relic of the old statesmen of the days of Clay, Calhoun, and Webster. He still clings to the swallow tail coat with the bright gold buttons which were used by all of the fashionable men of that time. It is leaner and prettier than the Prince Albert or the cutaway of the present. In fact, the dress of men has been growing simpler during the past century. Washington who died in 1799 wore ruffles on his sleeves, and half of the men who signed the Declaration of Independence wore powdered wigs. Jefferson sported knee breeches, and Madison was proud of having worn a suit of clothes of American make at his inauguration. Daniel Webster usually wore a suit of snuff brown color with a large soft necktie. Martin Van Buren was very fastidious about his clothes and always appeared during the summer in the whitest of white duck linen. His clothes were cut in the latest styles, and he wore very high stock neckties out of which peeped his standing collar, making his head look like that of John the Baptist on a charger. Andrew Jackson also dressed well, though he did not make his clothes a great matter. Henry Clay wore a swallow tail and a standing collar extravagantly high. James Buchanan was always very precise in his clothes, always appearing in full dress. He had great trouble as to how he should appear when he was our minister to England, and the discussion involved the queen of England herself.

England's Ten Greatest Men.

[New York Graphic.]

"Who are the ten greatest living Englishmen?" has been answered by over 1,400 correspondents in competing for a prize offered by The Pall Mall Gazette. Lord Salisbury received the highest vote as the greatest statesman. Lord Wolseley was almost unanimously voted the greatest soldier. Henry Irving won easily the place of greatest actor, although he received some scattering votes for the rank of greatest humbug. Canon Liddon, not widely known here, came out ahead as greatest preacher, and Mr. Millais received the large vote of 846 as greatest painter to 148 for Sir Frederick Leighton. Huxley beats Tyndall about two to one as the greatest man of science. John Ruskin as greatest writer, gets the large vote of 578, followed next by Tennyson with only 262. Wilkie Collins takes the prize as the greatest novelist, although he leads William Black by but 17 votes. Sala distances John Morley and all the Times, Punch, and Saturday Review men as the greatest journalist. Altogether, it proves to be a most interesting and instructive contention.

London Police.

[London Letter.]

By far the best-looking men in London to-day are the police. The soldiers can't compare with them. The hard times have evidently induced many farmers' sons and others of superior caliber to enter the police force who are persons of education and have excellent manners. Yet a London policeman receives only $7 a week. He has a pension, though, if he stays on.

VIEWING AN ICEBURG.

One of the Magnificent Sights of an Ocean Voyage.

[New York Graphic.]

At 12 o'clock we went below, and had just got through dinner when the cook put his head down through the scuttle and told us to come on deck and see the finest sight we had ever seen. "Where away, cook?" asked the first man who went up. "On the larboard bow." And there lay floating in the ocean, several miles off, an immense, irregular mass, its top and points covered with snow, and its center a deep indigo color. This was an iceberg, one of the largest size, as one of our men said, who had been in the Northern ocean.

As far as the eye could reach the sea in every direction was of a deep blue color, the waves running high and fresh and sparkling in the light; and in the midst lay this immense mountain island, its cavities and valleys thrown into deep shade, and its points and pinnacles glittering in the sun. All hands were soon on deck looking at it, and admiring in various ways its beauty and grandeur, but no description can give any idea of the strangeness, splendor and real sublimity of the sight. Its great size, for it must have been from two to three miles in circumference and several hundred feet in height; its slow motion, as its base rose and sank in the water, and its high points nodded against the clouds, the dashing of the waves upon it, which, breaking high with foam, covered its base with a white crest, the thundering sound of the cracking of the mass, and the breaking and tumbling down of huge pieces, together with its nearness of approach which added a slight element of fear, all combined to give it a character of true sublimity.

The main body of the mass was as I have said, of an indigo color, its base was crusted with frozen foam, and, as it grew thin and transparent toward the edges and top its color shaded off from a deep blue to the whiteness of snow. It seemed to be drifting slowly toward the north, so that we kept away and avoided it. It was in sight all the afternoon, and, as we got to leeward of it the wind died away, so that we lay to quite near it for the greater part of the night. Unfortunately, there was no moon but it was a clear night, and we could plainly mark the long regular heaving of the stupendous mass as its edges moved slowly against the stars. Several times in our watch loud cracks were heard which sounded as though they must have run through the whole length of the iceberg, and several pieces fell down with a thundering crash, plunging heavily into the sea. Toward morning a strong breeze sprung up, and at daylight it was out of sight.

Utilizing Stale Bread.

[Exchange.]

The persistence shown by the Parisian bakers in keeping up the price of bread, notwithstanding the great fall in the price of flour, has drawn attention to the contrariety and brought out some odd facts in connection with the trade. In addition to the bakers proper there are, it seems, a number of second hand bakers in Paris who trade in the broken scraps which daily accumulate in all large establishments—such as hotels and colleges—where bread is consumed on a great scale. This refuse is bought by weight, the best bits are picked out and sold to the cheap restaurants, which turn them to account in various ways. The bread soup and other culinary concoctions on which customers are regaled in the cheap restaurants, where a dinner of courses is to be had for 30 cents, are indebted for a portion of their ingredients to this source of supply. ... less presentable morsels are baked a second time and ground in a mortar. The powder is then sold to the pork butchers, who use it to garnish the surface of the hams and cutlets which present such an appetizing appearance in their shop windows.

LIFE IN NEW SOUTH WALES.

Dire Effects of the Drought—Fighting the Kangaroos.

[Foreign Letter.]

"The past year has been disastrous to the stockmen, and consequently business of all kinds has suffered greatly," said Mr. Burchitt, a resident of Sydney, New South Wales. "For twelve months not a drop of rain has fallen in New South Wales, and as a result the cattle and sheep have died by hundreds of thousands. One man lost 150,000 sheep and 15,000 cattle, and many others have been ruined. This is the most severe drought since 1826, and has been so terrible that in many instances wild beasts, large birds like the emu, cattle and sheep may be seen struggling in the holes where the surface water collects. The rabbits are the greatest pests which the Australians have ever been called on to fight. They are so numerous that at times the plains for miles are alive with them, and are so thickly covered by the moving mass that what little verdure there is is covered from sight.

"The kangaroo is also a very troublesome animal, and since herbage has been cut off by the drought these animals come up boldly to the dwellings in search of food. The government and the stockmen expend large sums of money in exterminating these vermin. Ferrets and gun powder are used to kill rabbits, and the kangaroos are surrounded by large bodies of men and killed by thousands. There is no apparent diminution, however, in the number of the pests, and it is becoming a serious problem whether they will not eventually drive the people from their stock farms. The damage done by wild animals and the disastrous effect of the drought have practically put an end to stock-raising in some portions of New South Wales. On ranches where a year ago the grass was twelve inches high the ground is now covered six inches deep with dry sand, which has been blown in by the wind."

Mr. Burchitt has been engaged in the wholesale tobacco business in Sydney.

Speaking of the Australians, Mr. Burchitt said: "They are remarkably fond of athletic sports and racing. Cricket, rowing, football, etc., are generally indulged in, and so far as racing is concerned they go ahead of any other nation. The tracks at Melbourne and Sydney are the finest in the world, and the racing stock is of the very best. Betting runs very high, and immense sums are lost and won at each meeting. At the race for the Melbourne cup there are frequently 300 entries, with thirty starters. The attendance is generally from 100,000 to 150,000. The races are hotly contested, and Martin Henry, the winner of the Melbourne cup last year, made two miles in 3.27½, beating the best record ever made. He won by a head, carrying 106 pounds."

In reference to the settlement of the country it has come to be the case that squatters are taking up small farms in the midst of the grazing country, as they have a right to do under the law. Each man can take 640 acres anywhere he can find unoccupied land, and the watercourses are generally taken first. This compels the stockmen to buy out the squatters, and leads to a great deal of ill-feeling. "As one of the results of the drought," said Mr. Burchitt, "many stockmen who a year ago could draw a check for 100,000 pounds sterling, are not now worth a 5-pound note. The banks hold all the land and the stock, and for their own protection must carry the ranchmen through until it rains."

The Largest Crane.

The new crane now being erected at Hamburg will have a lifting capacity of 147 tons. This will be the largest crane in operation on the continent, the next in size being the one now working at Antwerp, and which lifts 120 tons.

THE FUTURE BATTLEFIELD.

The Effect of the Breech-Loader Mismanaged—Keeping to Line.

[New York Times.]

"No Footsteps but Some Almost Backward" was the name of the paper read before the Military Service Institution by Capt. Edward Field of the Fourth artillery. Capt. Field said that we were at present in the midst of a transition period. The effect of the breech-loader in war was as yet only problematical. "How far has it changed the conditions of battle?" he asked; "Up to the present time an idea has been prevalent that the line is nearly obsolete, as also the column, and that the battles of the future will be fought in open order and will consist of rapid advances, or rather rushes of successive skirmish groups, taking advantage of every opportunity to cover, and that the final result will be determined by the ability to supply a steady stream of men and ammunition that will be needed where the consumption is so rapid.

"Depend upon it," continued Capt. Field, "no attempt ... [illegible] ... heritage of barbarism." Capt. Field asked whether it would not be impossible to keep men in any solid order under the modern fire. If the allegation were correct, and men could only live in skirmish order, then the weapon had been refined and perfected until war was practically impossible, for no nation would be long willing to commit its fortunes to such confused and desultory, although gigantic skirmishes, where after the pall of smoke had once settled no directing skill or forethought could be of any avail. "It is not improbable," he said, "that the nature of the breech-loader may breed a caution which may confine future armies so closely to earthworks as to suggest that most degenerate period of the Roman empire when the legionaries who had hewn their way to the sovereignty of the world took refuge behind huge shields of wicker-work. I don't believe that it will be impossible to keep men in line on the actual battlefield."

Capt. Field thought that the Americans were admirably provided with everything that could bring a regiment on a line of battle in excellent order, and once there—thanks to Creedmoor—they would shoot better than most armies; but had Americans any of those tactics which could prevent disaster? They would stand in good stead in everything they had been taught to do mechanically, and that was about all. Capt. Field was alluding to the rank and file.—Something ought to be done to introduce systematic studies of the lessons of history. Military history was not neglected, but there was history and history. It was of more importance for Americans to know exactly how and where Butler failed than where Bonaparte succeeded. "Why should not all the surviving officers of the war," he asked, "be earnestly requested to contribute information on their experiences, which information would be the most practical of text books, and from which text books could be very readily prepared? Why should we not have from such a war a literature?"

Capt. Field said it would not do to assume that there would be no more Indian wars. Until the national trusts of the Indians were swept away it was absolutely necessary that most should know how to deal with them in case of outbreak. Opportunities ought to ... West Point to study practical ... on the subject, as it was a most important point of his profession.

THE RIGHT KIND OF TENANTS.

A Little Story Told by a Kind-Hearted Landlord.

[Chicago Herald.]

"Oh, yes, I have all kinds of tenants," said a kind-faced old gentleman, whose vest was big enough to make an overcoat for some men. He was conversing with friends in a State street restaurant. "I have tenants rich, tenants poor, tenants good and tenants mean, but the one that I like the best is a child not more than ten years of age."

"A child!" every one asked.

"Yes, a little boy. A few years ago I got a chance to buy a piece of land over on the west side at reasonable figures, and did so. I noticed that there was an old coop of a house on it, but I paid no attention to it. After awhile a man came to me and wanted to know if I would rent it to him.

"'What do you want it for?' says I.

"'To live in,' he replied.

I told him it was not fit to live in, but he said he was handy with tools and that he would fix it up some if I would let him have it cheap. 'Well,' I said, 'go ahead. You can have it. Pay me what you think it is worth to you.'

"The first month he brought $4, and the second month a little boy, who said he was this man's son, came with $2. After that I saw the man once in awhile, but in the course of time the boy paid the rent regularly, sometimes $2 and sometimes $3. One day I asked the boy what had become of his father.

"'He's dead, sir,' was the reply.

"'Is that so?' said I. 'How long since?'

"'More'n a year,' he answered.

"I took his money, but I made up my mind that I would go over and investigate, but one thing and another prevented until finally he came around again. Then I determined to go anyway, and the next day I drove over there. The old shed looked quite decent. I knocked at the door and a little girl let me in. I asked for her mother. She said she didn't have any.

"'Where is she?' said I.

"'We don't know, sir. She went away after my father died and we've never seen her since.'

"Just then a little girl about 8 years old came in, and I learned that these three children had been keeping house together for a year and a half, the boy supporting his two little sisters by blacking boots and selling newspapers and the older girl managing the house and taking care of the baby. Well, I just had my daughter call on them, and we keep an eye on them now. I thought I wouldn't disturb them while they are getting along. The next time the boy came with the rent I talked with him a little and then I said:

"'My boy, you're a brick. You keep right on as you have begun and you will never be sorry. Keep your little sisters together and never leave them. Now look at this.'

"I showed him a ledger on which I had entered up all the money that he had paid me for rent and I told him that it was all his with interest. 'You keep right on,' says I, 'and I'll be your banker, and when this amounts to a little more I'll see that you get a house somewhere of your own.' That's the kind of a tenant to have."

Nothing Better Than Water.

[Exchange.]

The campaign in the Soudan has shown that the greatest hardships can be carried on far better without the use of intoxicating drink than with it. One quart of muddy water a day is doled out to the army, and there has been scarcely an invalid.

The propriety of nominating Hon. [illegible] of Franklin county as the republican candidate for state treasurer is admitted by all [illegible] and is very well qualified for the position. REMOVAL FOR CAUSE.

Hon. F. W. Palmer was removed as postmaster of Chicago because he was "offensive" to the present administration. One of his offenses was contributing to the Blaine campaign fund. Another was that he allowed government employees and carpenters to erect platforms upon which republican speakers advocated the election of Blaine &c. &c. If there is a republican postmaster in the United States who would not commit every offensive act that Mr. Palmer did he is a [illegible] and ought to have been kicked out of office while the republicans were in power. There are such and it is well known who they are and it is to be hoped that the powers that be will not be long in [illegible] them.

We have known Frank Palmer from his boyhood and there is not a citizen of Illinois who possesses more of the [illegible] that make up a true man than he. It is not in his nature to be false to anybody, much less to a political party from which he has received so many favors and which he has honored in many positions. He would scorn to truckle to the ruling power for the sake of retaining any position in its gift. As editor of the old Jamestown Journal, as one of the representatives of Chautauqua county in the New York assembly, as the [illegible] editor of two of the prominent papers of Iowa, at Dubuque and Des Moines, as the representative for two terms of the Des Moines district in congress, as editor of the leading papers of Chicago and as its postmaster for several years past he has filled every position with ability and fidelity such as is seldom seen in another in these times.

The Cleveland post office under his administration has been a model office and has been conducted upon purely business principles and with a view to accommodate its patrons in every possible way. Its [illegible] has been such as to receive the commendation of the [illegible] at administration. But the [illegible] wanted [illegible] and Mr. Palmer was kicked out without giving him any reasons for so doing. His commission would not have expired in three years and what has [illegible] friend in [illegible] John A. Logan it is very likely the senate will take some cognizance of this utter ignoring of the tenure of office act.

The Cleveland administration has been having terrible luck in selecting men to represent it in official capacities. Two cases have recently been considered because of the character of the appointees. A chap by the name of [illegible] was appointed as consul to [illegible] but before he received it the discovery was made that he was recently arrested for assaulting Commodore Truxton in the Ebbitt house in Washington and that his wife has obtained a divorce from him on the ground of neglect and brutality. He also boasted that he was a rebel still in his affair with Truxton. To the credit of the administration his commission was revoked.

Another character by the name of Blackburn was appointed revenue collector for the seventh Kentucky district. He is a brother of Senator Blackburn of that state who is swearing mad because the government declines to commission his brother on account of a letter written during the war. The letter was written to his wife from Abingdon, Va., and closes with these words:

"I hope that I will do my duty as a rebel and a free man. Since I hate the union men of Kentucky I intend to begin the work of murder [illegible] and if I ever spare one of them may hell be my portion. I want to see union blood flow deep enough for my horses to swim in.

Your husband,

JAMES BLACKBURN."

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND was very moderate and conciliatory in his remarks to the visiting Mormons. If he had consulted public sentiment or desired to be consistent with the pledges of his platform he would have said something like this:

Gentlemen, you represent an institution which under a pretended form of religion deliberately insults the moral code of our civilization and defiantly violates the common law of the land in territory belonging to the United States. With only polygamy is a penal offense in every state of the union and this is not tolerated either by law or society in any one of them, you ask that it shall be respected and protected by law in a territory owned by them. So far from pledging you this protection I now distinctly warn you that I shall direct every energy of my administration to the annihilation of your vicious institution, an institution barbarous in its inception, bloody and lawless in its conduct, and repulsive to public decency in its manifestations immorality.

That is about what that sturdy democrat of other days Andrew Jackson would have said on a similar occasion.—Phila. Press.

THE rebellion in Canada is at last ended and Riel the leader is captured. The most of the other prisoners have been allowed to return to their homes but the ringleaders will be taken to Prince Albert next Monday. The government has not yet considered the case of Riel. The best lawyers [illegible] say that he will be tried for treason [illegible] under the act of 1873. He may be tried either by a general court martial or by an ordinary civil tribunal. If by the former the governor general will appoint the court, and the sentence will require his confirmation. If he is tried before a civil tribunal his trial will be before a stipendiary magistrate and a justice of the peace, with a jury of six. In this case the evidence will be reported to the governor general through the lieutenant governor. In either case the trial will take place in the northwest, probably in Regina.

BEING senator for six years is much better than playing second fiddle to a president for four years.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

It is now seventy-four days since Mr. Cleveland was made president of the United States. During that time he has made appointments to fill most of the important legations abroad; he has removed many of the experienced men at the heads of the bureaus in the executive departments of the government. He has made changes in many positions of local importance and now the [illegible] post offices are being filled with democrats at the rate of about one hundred a day or about one appointment for every five minutes of a working day. Still there is discontent and disappointment with the administration in all parts of the country. Nothing short of a complete expulsion from office of present incumbents and the appointment of democrats will appease the office seekers and office brokers of the democratic party. They are howling for spoils and refuse to be comforted without them.

The office seeking crowds seem greater now at the interior and post office departments. The secretary of the interior takes a little rest now and then by slipping out quietly the back way for a walk while the office seekers are waiting massed in the hall before his door. The room in which office seekers wait to see if they can see Mr. Lamar is one of the dreariest most depressing places imaginable. It has no atmosphere, no light, and few seats. The crowds walk about, knock against one another, stare and look wretched. When the secretary signifies his intention of receiving, the crowd rushes into his room after the plan of first come first served.

[illegible] in the room where the crowd waits. There are plenty of seats in it however and some [illegible] On the wall hangs a [illegible] of the coat of arms of the Washington family and their pedigree. The anxious seekers while away time by reading this. It is the only means of diversion in the room.

Saturday is now called the president's day. Mr. Cleveland having set apart that day for his own use. All visitors being excluded, the white house wore a deserted air on Saturday last and the absence of Col. Lamont who was advised by his physicians to go to his New York home for a few days contributed to that result. The ushers guarded the foot of the stairways leading to the executive offices and Mr. Cleveland had the most quiet day Sundays excepted since he took possession of the mansion.

During the week there were four days of fine racing at the Washington race course. A noted English evangelist delivered a series of lectures in the city, a prominent democratic official was up before the police court, and there has been a large number of new appointments. Washington society and prominent visitors at the capital from all sections of the country attended the races. No jockey club in America perhaps none in the world can bring together so many distinguished and representative people as gathered daily to enjoy this popular sport. Included in the attendance were the vice president of the United States, heads of departments and bureaus, the [illegible] the senate and house were also largely represented. The district commissioners and local officials were there, and the foreign nations were represented in the diplomatic corps, the members of their families and attaches.

Mrs. Senator Logan was on the Avenue shopping in company with a group of friends when she was informed that her husband had been defeated by the election of Mr. Tree to the United States senate. Without betraying any disturbance Mrs. Logan continued her shopping and conversation with her companions for some minutes. Then she sought her carriage and went to a telegraph office where she asked her husband to send a [illegible] denial of the report. She was in [illegible] suspense [illegible] there were [illegible] she went to a [illegible] Mr. Blaine and spent the [illegible]

The real estate market shows no sign of stagnation in Washington. The fine residence on Scott Circle erected by Senator Don Cameron and more recently occupied by him has just been sold to Mr. Morgan of New York for $95,000. The house was built four years ago at a cost of $40,000 exclusive of the ground. The appreciation of values in that locality has been such that authorities regard this price as a fair one. Washington May 18 1885.

A NEW railroad, the Susquehanna Valley railroad, about twenty-five miles long, is projected to start from a point on the line of the Buffalo New York and Philadelphia railroad and run into the hemlock forest in Potter county. The railroad is built to carry away the woods it penetrates. This forest is one of the last great stretches of timber land in Pennsylvania, lying at the source of streams falling into the Genesee, Allegheny and Susquehanna rivers. It is one of the last places in the state where the sportsman may make sure of catching a trout or killing a deer. It is a great pity that it should be invaded and stripped by woodchoppers. After the trees are felled the springs will dry up and the streams fall away. The range of fire will follow the ravages of the ax and in good time grazing lands will become unproductive. The same process has been tried in Bradford and Tioga counties and the value of the [illegible] has been greatly diminished by the failure of the water supply. If the owners of land in those counties had had the [illegible] the land would be doubled in value.—Philadelphia Press.

GOV. PATTISON has appointed J. M. Forster, superintendent of insurance for this state. This action is very strange indeed. It is true that Mr. Forster is a competent man, but he is a democrat, and Pattison is not accustomed to opposing democrats to fill the offices.—Ridgway Democrat.

UP to Saturday last the banks of New York reported the largest cash reserves held in years by those institutions. This is evidence that few persons are borrowing money.

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.

Illustrating the Character of Gen. Grant as Seen by a Virginian After Lee's Surrender.

The Pittsburg Dispatch tells the following story, related by an army surgeon at Erie, Pa.: At the surrender of Lee I was serving as medical director of the Second Division of the Twenty fifth Army Corps. After the surrender the division was ordered to join the balance of the corps, near Petersburg, and we left Appomattox Court House on the 11th of April following the South Side railroad. The General commanding directed me to take an orderly and proceed to Prospect Station and there select a camping ground for the division and also a place to pitch our headquarters tents. I proceeded as directed, and after selecting a suitable camping ground, crossed the fields to a large white house near the station. As I rode up to the gate a most venerable and noble looking gentleman of probably sixty-five years came to the front gate and I asked him if he would have any objection to our pitching headquarters in his yard. He said: "I should be very glad to have you do it, as it will be a protection against the vandalism of the stragglers of the army." He asked me to come in but I told him I would prefer a seat on the veranda. Finding him to be a Methodist minister and a most polished gentleman, I became interested in him, and we began at once to discuss the unfortunate division of the church in 1844, and then I switched off on to the war. I asked him if he had ever seen Grant. "Yes," said he, "my house was full of your generals last night. There were Sheridan, Humphreys, Meade, Custer, Ord and quite a number of others and they were a lively set and full of fun and all were quite jolly with the exception of one officer who [illegible] and taking but little part in the sports in which the rest were engaged. They all went out of the house but this silent solitary man, and as I was going out he asked me where the pump was as he would like to get a drink. On offering to get him some water he said: 'No sir, I am younger than you I will go myself,' and as I passed out he came up behind me. When about the middle of the hall this little granddaughter came running toward me, but the silent man spread out both arms, caught her and taking her up fairly smothered her with kisses, saying 'This reminds me of my little girl at home and makes me homesick.' To the question 'Where is your home?' he replied '[illegible] but I have my family at City Point and am anxious to get back to them.' I said 'Will you permit me to ask your name, sir?' 'Certainly, my name is Grant.' 'Grant!' exclaimed I, 'General Grant!' and I stood there awe stricken and paralyzed with astonishment while my heart went out after this man. I thought to myself here is a man whose name is now in the mouth of man, woman and child throughout the civilized world, and yet withal he exhibits no emotion, and seems unconcerned and unmoved until the little child reminds him of his loved ones at home, and I fairly broke down as Gen. Grant had been pictured out to us as a bloody butcher, and I had looked for a man looking as savage as a Comanche Indian."

AT 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon the physicians in attendance upon ex Secretary Frelinghuysen stated that he could not possibly survive the day. He sank into a comatose condition shortly after the announcement and at 5.30 p. m. breathed his last.

Gratefulness.

Mr. H. Samuel, Ottawa, Kansas, writes "Dr. S. B. Hartman & Co., Columbus, O.—Gentlemen:—I have suffered for seven years; have tried every lung and many physicians, and all have failed. I went to Pittsburgh, and while there I fell on the street, my breath seemed to leave my lungs, and numbness overpower me. I determined to give PERUNA and MANALIN a trial. I used four bottles of each, and my trouble left, never I hope to return. I left Pittsburgh three weeks ago for Kansas, and thought, as I was going to a new country, I had better take a bottle of MANALIN with me, on account of bad water, etc. I arrived here with one half bottle. I found one of my friends in a pretty bad condition. The doctors were treating her for chills and fever. I did not know what her trouble was, though I persuaded her to use the MANALIN. She did so, and the next day she was up doing her work. Now this seems strange, but it is, never theless, a candid truth. She used it all, and has never had cause to lie down during the day since she took the first three doses."

A Case that was Pronounced Incurable.

Miss C. C. Peck, 714 Jackson street, Milwaukee, Wis., writes: "Dr. S. B. Hartman & Co.—Gentlemen: I take great pleasure in stating to you the benefit I received from your valuable PERUNA. I have been suffering for about fifteen years with a severe cough and bronchitis (so the doctors call it). I was treated by different physicians, and spent considerable money for different kinds of patent medicines, but received no benefit whatever. Dr. Fox, of this city, claimed I had consumption, and there was no hope for me ever getting better. I was so bad that I coughed almost continually. Mrs. Henry Ellis, a friend of mine, induced me to try your PERUNA. I am happy to say I began to notice a change after I had taken my second bottle. I took eight bottles in all, and now I feel like a new woman. If it hadn't been for PERUNA I think I would be in my grave now. It is a wonderful remedy, and I recommend it to all my friends."

Messrs. Baker Bros., Mt. Vernon, O., write: "Your PERUNA sells well. Customers speak of it as being a good medicine."

Mr. Daniel R. Spry, Portsmouth, O., writes: "I have a good trade in PERUNA. It sells well and gives satisfaction."

IT LEADS ALL.

No other blood-purifying medicine is made, or has ever been prepared, which so completely meets the wants of physicians and the general public as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

It leads the list as a truly scientific preparation for all blood diseases. If there is a lurking taint of Scrofula about you, SCROFULA AYER'S SARSAPARILLA will dislodge it and expel it from your system. For constitutional or scrofulous Catarrh, CATARRH AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is the true remedy. It has cured numberless cases. It will stop the nauseous catarrhal discharges, and remove the sickening odor of the breath, which are indications of scrofulous origin.

ULCEROUS SORES "Hutto, Tex., Sept. 28, 1882. —At the age of two years one of my children was terribly afflicted with ulcerous running sores on its face and neck. At the same time its eyes were swollen, much inflamed, and very sore. SORE EYES Physicians told us that a powerful alterative medicine must be employed. They united in recommending AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. A few doses produced a perceptible improvement, which, by an adherence to your directions, was continued to a complete and permanent cure. No evidence has since appeared of the existence of any scrofulous tendencies; and no treatment of any disorder was ever attended by more prompt or effectual results. Yours truly, B. F. JOHNSON."

The bear man that has been on exhibition in different parts of the county for some weeks past, was brought here on Tuesday last, but in the estimation of Ben King is not much of a curiosity, still [illegible] a little more than some other [illegible] he has seen.

We have often heard it remarked by our older citizens that this county, and more especially this part of it, was one of the most healthy climes to be found on the face of the globe, but after taking a look at the monumental shops and yards of W. H. Martin on Water street we are inclined to the belief that people "pass away" in this locality.

On Wednesday morning last the inhabitants of the "island," a part of the city of Bradford, two know not what part were aroused by a disturbance between two fellows who each claimed possession to the same piece of furniture. Both of the combatants were terribly pommelled and cut, and one of them to such an extent that he died about noon.

Frank Taylor has finally succeeded in being the possessor of one of the neatest cafes in the county, the finishing piece of furniture being put in on Monday, consisting of a large and elegant mirror. Upon being asked the expense of the glass, Frank replied "Oh, it was a present. [illegible], the printers got it for me." Well, [illegible] it Frank, there is one printer who will not contribute in that part of the [illegible] another dime nickel.

Rev. Wm. Bradley, in his last Sunday morning's sermon, was inclined to [illegible] of the honesty of our government. He referred, casually, to the recent counting of the government money, when a loss of only two cents was discovered, out of the hundreds of millions which have been received and disbursed by the government within the past few years. We would advise Brother Bradley not to exalt too much over [the] situation. There will probably be a different state of affairs in a few short years. The "rascals" have just taken hold.

The borough authorities have taken hold of the street grade question in earnest, and with a determination to carry out the plans which were adopted, and in which considerable advancement was made a few years ago. There should be a uniform grade for both streets and sidewalks, and especially on Main street. There is no reason why it should not be one of the most beautiful streets in this section of the state, for at least a mile in distance.

An Unsavory Romance.

Michael Hanum, editor of a summer [illegible] ... that he [illegible] ... [illegible] to which Mr. Armstrong, our express agent, consented. Mike [illegible] then called for to liquidate and on Monday managed to get his trunk down to the B. B. & K. depot, when it struck Mr. Armstrong that Mike was playing a little ruse on him, and after finding the well dressed and gay Michael, who could not explain why he had a strong [illegible] the depot, rather induced him to doff his coat, yield up his watch and $[illegible] in good and lawful money of the United States, to secure the bill which amounted to $12.00. James McNulty learning of the affair, and not wishing to lose a board bill of $20.00 which he had made Hanum, attached the trunk in the hands of the depot agent, which he still holds as security for his debt. And then a third voice, more plaintive than the former two, was raised by one Healey, a shoemaker, who demanded of 'Squire Ford "some sort of a paper to get $4 from Hanum" who owed him for a pair of dude shoes. To make a long story short the shoemaker got his shoes back [illegible] ... friends gave Hanum the necessary wherewith to get to the "home of natural advantages," where he will probably remain.

A Model Poor House.

From this on the poor people of McKean county, those unable to maintain themselves, will have a more comfortable home in which to spend their days than three-fourths of the people of the county who are in affluent circumstances. The finishing touches of the buildings which have been in process of construction for the past six or eight months, are now being put on them, and it is expected that they will be ready for occupancy by the first of June. The plumbing, under the expert Donahue is being rapidly yet thoroughly done, and the old boss mason, Frank Moses, is superintending the setting of the boilers, which insures a first-class job. The ventilation and drainage of all the buildings is as complete as modern ingenuity can devise, and with a plenty of fresh water and bath tubs at hand, there need be no fear of epidemics around those quarters. Sol Richmond is making the farm blossom as a rose. There will be about 35 paupers from different sections of the county, ready to take up quarters in the county buildings as soon as they are ready to receive them.

A Valuable Horse Stolen.

James Higgins of Barden Brook, Eldred township, had stolen from his barn on Thursday night of last week, a valuable light bay mare and a single harness. The thieves also took a side-bar buggy belonging to John Welsh, a near neighbor. The loss is particularly severe to Mr Higgins, just at this season of the year, while engaged in putting in crops. He was able to follow the tracks of the outfit to the summit of the hill between Barden Brook and King's Run, but there lost trace of it. The probabilities are that the thieves changed their course into the oil country.

Memorial Service.

The usual Sabbath service in connection with the observance of Decoration Day, will be held in the Methodist Episcopal church, May 24th, at 3 o'clock p. m., the pastor, Rev. Wm. Bradley, preaching the sermon. McKean Post, G. A. R. No. 347, will be present in full dress uniform. The singing will be done by a male quartette under the leadership of Dr. H. L. McCoy. The public are respectfully invited to attend. On account of the Memorial service in the afternoon, there will be no service in the Methodist Episcopal church in the evening.

Baptist Church.

Services next Sunday as usual, with the exception of the meeting at Farmer's Valley in the afternoon. On account of the Memorial service in the M. E. church at 3 o'clock p. m., that appointment will be rescinded.

The fourth lecture on Joseph will be given in the evening, including his deliverance from prison, and advancement to be ruler over Egypt.

St. Luke's Church.

Divine services on next Sunday (Whit-Sunday) as follows: Holy Communion 8 a. m.; Litany 10:15; Second Celebration Holy Communion 10:30 a. m. Evening Prayer at 8 o'clock.

Now and "Backfall" Twins.

Ed. Miner—Dear Comrade: I speak once more for the brave dead. If Gen. Kane was alive now he would be just as glad to see a soldier in a private's dress as he would to see him on a war-horse. He thought just as much of a private as he did of a general. There is more being said against the features of the late Gen. Kane being seen on the sailor's and soldier's monument, than there is against sending Jeff Davis back to Washington to make laws for a country he tried to destroy. Boys, what harm can the face of Gen. Kane do the monument? Some face must be there and why not that of one who enlisted for the war as a private [illegible] ... [illegible] general? If his figure was to be placed there on his war horse, dressed in the gold trappings of a general [illegible] ... [illegible]

While it is true we want [illegible] ... [illegible] ... ranks of the dead comrades, and it all becomes us to be wrangling over a question of such slight import. Comrades, names are nothing, but deeds are everything, and one brave comrade is as good as another. Let us as comrades through our camp fires and other assemblages talk the people out of all the [illegible] ... [illegible] ... grounds at Smethport [illegible]

Fraternally yours,

S. S. [illegible]

Kane, Pa., May [illegible], 1885.

[illegible heading]

Ed. Miner:—There was [illegible] ... [illegible] ... If the names of the dead [illegible] ... [illegible] ... [illegible] of individuality.

The Most Profitable Horses.

Farmers make a mistake when they slight the advantages to be derived from keeping good horses, and from breeding a pair or two of colts every year. A three-year-old colt can be reared as cheaply as a cow of the same age, but while an ordinary price for a three-year-old cow is forty dollars, a young colt is worth seventy-five dollars, at the very least, when a year old, and one hundred and fifty dollars when three years old. If, however, a good thoroughbred is raised, at the cost of fifty dollars, the colt at three years may easily be worth three hundred dollars. Roadsters of the north and saddle horses in the south, are really valuable, are the most desirable animals to rear. The thoroughbred blood is like the steel one puts into a machine. It gives strength, firmness, tightness, durability, elasticity and vigor to the cold blood. The bone is harder, and more solid, and lighter, the sinews are stronger and more elastic, the muscles are firmer, and have greater tenacity, the lungs are more capacious, the weight is reduced, and with more strength and vivacity of motion, and less weight, we have swiftness and ease of movement.—American Agricultural for June.

Literary Notes.

"Ladies' Day at the Ranch" is the taking title of a paper in the forthcoming June Harper's, describing life on a western ranch, owned by "quite an ideal firm"—consisting of a millionaire blissfully indifferent to the ways in which his millions were being spent, a man of leisure, with nothing to do but to travel—for the best interests of the 'concern'—between New York and Cimarron, and an enthusiast who desired nothing but the privilege of doing all the work." It was the enthusiast, of course, who lived at the ranch, and one spring the family of the man of leisure took it into their heads to visit him, and liked the life so well that they stayed from April to November. The paper gives a very lively description of that life, its perils and fascinations—cyclones, for instance, and prairie fires; and, one of its most entertaining bits is the written description sent by the host to his prospective visitors, in the way of traveling directions—a strange enough piece of literature to those accustomed to the well marked roads of settled states. The paper is written by Alice Wellington Rollins, and charmingly illustrated by R. Swain Gifford and his wife.

Five Years in State Prison.

The trial of R. H. Thornton for perjury at the county court last week resulted in his conviction. The jury took but a few minutes to come to their conclusion Thursday afternoon. Judge Farnum sentenced the prisoner to five years in state prison.

As stated by us last week this case grew out of Thornton's testimony in divorce proceedings between E. N. Crandall, the well known music dealer, and his wife. The former sought a divorce on the ground of his wife's infidelity but was met by a cross suit from the woman. Thornton was the principal witness against Crandall and by his testimony, which was very severe, the woman was given a divorce from him. Crandall then insisted that the man's testimony was false, and his conviction is generally regarded as a matter of justice in punishing him and in vindicating Mr. Crandall. Thornton was a former resident of Clarksville and of Friendship, but has been in Smethport, Pa., since his indictment. He is 23 years old.—Cuba Patriot of the 17th.

A Challenge.

The following epistle was received by us last week, but too late for that issue:

Editor Miner:—Alf. Miller, champion light weight pugilist of England, will spar any man with soft gloves or bare knuckles for from $250 to $500 a side. My weight is 130 pounds.

I will also back Robert Hislop, of Clermont, McKean county, Pa., to wrestle Jack Burke, of New York, for $500 a side, match to take place in Hislop's county the latter part of June. We will meet Burke at Bradford or Smethport as [illegible] ... Any one interested can answer through [this] paper.

Air-Signals on Railroads.

"After June 1," remarked a Pennsylvania railroad official recently, "we shall have no more trains stopped by cranks jumping up and suddenly pulling the bell-rope, to the consternation of all the passengers." $75,000 in Dry Goods

Not damaged by fire, to be sold without regard to cost. We will offer at less than cost a large portion of our stock, at prices as low and perhaps lower than [illegible] ... damaged goods. We will meet any price. It pays to look around, and we invite a comparison of prices on dry goods and carpets. Every stock and department will offer the same corresponding reductions which will amount to a [illegible] ... but will meet the expectations of our customers and friends. Take this for granted. We are going to sell some dry goods for much less than value. We will not stop there, but will sell a number of thousand dollars of fresh new goods at an absolute loss. This will include carpets, curtains, draperies, wall papers, silks, dress goods, wraps, hosiery, gloves, prints, chambrays, muslins, white goods, napkins, towels, Hamburghs. Take time and look around, thereby post ing yourself as to the best and lowest prices. If we are above the prices on the street, we cannot expect to sell. That is all.

"I never patronize Patent Medicines. Don't you? Why not? You patronize "patent" articles of a hundred varieties—why not patent medicines." "Because they are often worthless." True, but not always. Frequently they are the very best in the world, representing the widest experience. At least we know that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is one of these, and for all troubles of the blood, liver and urinary organs it stands on its merits, and not on advertising.

AN INTERESTING LETTER

From Mr. Harry W. Olmstead, Superintendent of "The Times."

The following letter is encouraging and worthy of careful perusal, coming, as it does, from so reliable a source, unsolicited. It contains facts of great value:

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 12, 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—For ten years I have been a sufferer from disease of the kidneys, at times so much so as to make life a burden. During this time several of the best physicians in Indiana have treated me with little or no success, until I had almost despaired of relief. I then tried several advertised remedies, but nothing produced the desired result until a friend who had been relieved induced me to give DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY a trial. I did so. After taking one bottle I began to experience relief. I took another and was charmed with the result. In all, I have taken four bottles, and can truly say I feel like a new man. I am confident I am entirely cured, as it has been several months since I took the last medicine, and there is no indication of a return of the disease. I have recommended your remedy to several suffering friends who have also been relieved. I desire to return my sincere thanks to you for the cure which has been effected in my case, and also desire to say I think suffering humanity owes you a debt of gratitude for your wonderful scientific discovery. I shall do all that in me lies to let all sufferers know where they may find relief, and thereby in some measure remunerate you for the good you have done me.

Wishing you long life and prosperity, and thanking you for prolonging my life, I am

Harry W. Olmstead.

SAFES NOT SAFE.

The Best of Them Easily Opened by Expert Cracksmen.

[Boston Globe.]

"Are safes fire and burglar proof? Well, that is rather a leading, or perhaps I should say, a misleading, question that you ask me." Thus replied a leading safe manufacturer to the query of the reporter. "If you ask me can safes be made fire-proof and burglar-proof, or fire and burglar-proof, then I answer you yes, for they are thus made. The public at large does not seem to fully comprehend what safes are for. Some safes are intended simply to resist the ravages of fire, for they are meant to hold only documents and other articles that may be almost beyond value to their owner, but which are financially valueless to strangers, and hence have no temptations for the ordinary burglar. Then there are others that are meant to resist the enterprising safe-breaker as well as the ravages of the fire fiend."

"It is claimed by some that any safe can be broken open."

"So it can," replied the manufacturer, "but it takes time. Any safe can be opened by expert cracksmen if they have plenty of time to do the work. All that any maker claims for burglar-proof safes is that they will make such resistance to thieves who may desire to open them as to be, to all intents and purposes, free from danger."

"This, then, being the case, the larger the safe the more secure it is."

"Well, if two safes are made of the same material, of course the thicker one would take longer to drill holes through than the other. But a steel safe is much safer than a common iron one. There is no safe, and I suppose there never will be one invented, that cannot be burglarized if sufficient time is allowed. Otherwise, how could any safe ever be opened when the key was lost or mislaid or the combination forgotten? All that any safe manufacturer claims, or that any purchaser can reasonably expect, is that we can make safes so difficult to open that there will not be time for thieves to do the job."

"Then I should judge that you would consider an inferior safe that was placed in a good light and in full view of the street, so that it might be watched by the police, is better protected than a bigger and better built one that is in a secluded place."

"O yes, of course, 100 per cent. safer if you notify the police. The man that hit upon the idea of lighting up his place of business and putting his safe where it could be seen was a genius and a benefactor to the community. If I had a lot of money that I could not get into the bank to-night, I should light the gas when locking up the store, and notify the policeman on the route that if the light went out he must get in and see what was the cause of it being out. You see burglars like plenty of time to open safes, and they hate to be watched. You would be surprised to know the number of safes that are to be found in private residences at the Back Bay. There are hundreds if not thousands of them in houses where the ready money that is kept in them amounts to hardly anything. You know that there are other things that are valuable besides money and business papers. Many a fashionable and wealthy lady has laces, shawls and diamonds that are worth a small fortune, and these must be kept in the house where they may be ready for use at any moment. You see, then that it is necessary to keep them safely under lock and key, where they are not in danger of disappearing through fire or burglars, or that other evil that housekeepers suffer from, dishonest servants. There are hundreds of private residences where the inside head of the house does not see the inside of the safe from one year to the other. The prices of safes range from $500 to $5,000, $10,000, $20,000. There are government safes in this country that have cost as high as $40,000, but I guess that ordinary bank safes will average $5,000 apiece. The business has taken great strides during the past twenty years."

THE DIKES OF HOLLAND.

Battling with the Sea—A Sad, Anxious Look on Every Face—Danger.

[George H. Boughton in Harper's.]

Skirting along the dikes we had a good opportunity of seeing some of the incessant toil, some of the constant energy, care and battling with the sea, to keep out anything like a safe distance. The dikes about this island are perhaps the finest, the most constantly guarded in all the country. The dike workers are a distinct class—a guild, in fact, jealous of their craft and its rights and privileges. It is not the first comer who may be a regular dike worker, even if he should wish to be. We saw great gangs of them going from point to point with pick and shovel, ever on the lookout for weak spots in the great embankment, ever relaying it with tufts of concrete, and strengthening ever point with strong groins running into the sea.

It was almost pathetic to note with what solicitude every blade of the binding bent-grass was coaxed to grow. Every little tuft was watched and tended as if it was some choice tulip. The top of the dike formed a level, firm road, stretching away for miles. The sea looked so mild and gray and innocent as it gently lapped the edges of the mighty barrier that it seemed an effort to fancy it an enemy capable of mischief. The breezes were simply delicious and fresh, coming over the wide North sea. Inland the scenery was flat and grim and serious. Farmsteads in the far distance looked green and fat enough. Sheep and kine were plentiful about the rich fields. Just over the edge of the dykes were the little scattered hamlets of the fisher people and the poldermen—the dyke workers lived more of a roving life, camping out here and there as their work called them from one point to another. Sometimes the wind had blown up and the seas tossed up great long meandering mounds of sand helping to back and strengthen the dikes. On these billowy hillocks the grass was carefully planted in little regular tufts, and stunted pines were set wherever the tempest would spare them to grow. All sorts of binding vegetation were carefully protected. The very children knew enough to let it alone.

There are watchers ever on the lookout, day and night, calm and storm. No wonder that the sad, anxious look one sees on every face, that seems to be born with every baby, should be the only characteristic expression one remarks among the people here! When the watchers at the dikes see danger the alarm bell is rung, and every soul either flies to the dikes for safety or to help the gangs of workers to stop the threatened breach. All sounds and sights were of peace and calm, and yet there somehow came upon the imagination the grim reverse of the picture, the clanging alarm bell, the hurry to and fro, the wild flight for safety from the mad, hungry sea. We were feeling deadly oppressed by the prevailing seriousness of the place.

Darkening Oak.

[Scientific American.]

To render new oak wainscoting and oak furniture dark, and give it an antique appearance, we have it from good authority that ammonia is the cleanest, best, and cheapest material that can be used. The liquid stains commonly used are apt to raise the grain of the wood, make it rough, and it is with difficulty evenly applied, whereas in the use of ammonia it is simply the fumes that color the wood, and do it so completely, that it is difficult to tell whether the wood is really new or old.

Signs Made with Sunbeams.

[Alta Californian.]

A signal man on top of the Santa Lucia range, in sight of Salinas, exchanges signals with other parties, presumably located on peaks of the Santa Cruz mountains. The communications are by means of flashes of light from a mirror reflecting the sun's rays, known as the heliograph. On a clear day parties from fifty to seventy miles apart can converse by means of a code of signals that are perfectly intelligible to them.

The encampment of the First Brigade at Sea Girt will occupy a week, or three days longer than last year.

The existence of pleuro-pneumonia in Missouri is causing alarm all over that State. The Governor has been requested to convene the Legislature for the purpose of adopting measures for preventing its spread.

The milk crop in England is now £30,000,000, or about $150,000,000. This is more than the value of the wheat crop, and the disproportion increases yearly, as the tendency is to stock feeding rather than to grain growing.

"Adam the goodliest man of men since born," still could not be called exactly enviable, for when he tilled the ground in the dewy twilight and caught a sharp touch of rheumatism, he had no Salvation Oil for his cure, and no twenty five cents to try it.

Certain Wisconsin farmers in recent meeting dared to resolve that the land granted the State by the general government for the establishment and maintenance of the agricultural college ought by right to be used for that purpose.

I have had Catarrh for years in its worst form. Before I had used one bottle of Ely's Cream Balm droppings into my throat had ceased, pain and soreness in my head was removed, as well as deafness. It gives me immediate relief for Cold in the head.—Mrs. J. D. Hagadorn, Union, N. Y. Price 50 cents.

Henry Stewart, who is good authority, states in the Tribune that sheep do best upon soils derived from limestone rocks, and worst upon those derived from sandstone and flint rocks. There are some facts which seem to be against this theory. It is one well worthy of investigation.

Baldness may be avoided by the use of Hall's Hair Renewer, which prevents the falling out of the hair, and stimulates it to renewed growth and luxuriance. It also restores faded or gray hair to its original dark color, and radically cures nearly every disease of the scalp.

Who has not observed that the soil is always loose and moist beneath a stone heap? The American Cultivator tells of some pear trees that were mulched with stones, and which made three times the growth of any others, though all did well.

Castor Oil.

One of the chief uses to which castor oil is put is that of dressing and softening leather for boots. It was formerly used for dosing children whose stomachs were disordered. And an awful dose it was. Now we give suffering children Brown's Iron Bitters, which tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, and imparts strength to the whole body. Brown's Iron Bitters is incomparably better than castor oil, and more pleasant to take.

Downright Cruelty.

To permit yourself and family to "Suffer!"
With sickness when it can be prevented and cured so easily
With Hop Bitters!!!

Having experienced a great deal of "Trouble!" from indigestion, so much so that I came near losing my Life!
My trouble always came after eating any food—
However light
And digestible.
For two or three hours at a time I had to go through the most Excruciating pains.
"And the only way I ever got"
"Relief!"
Was by throwing up all my stomach contained. No one can conceive the pains that I had to go through, until
"At last!"
I was taken! "So that for weeks I lay in bed and
Could eat nothing!
My sufferings were so that I called two doctors to give me something that would stop the pain; their Efforts were no good to me.
At last I heard a good deal
"About your Hop Bitters!
And determined to try them."
Got a bottle—in four hours I took the contents of One!
Next day I was out of bed, and have not seen a "Sick"
Hour, from the same cause since.
I have recommended it to hundreds of others.
You have no such
"Advocate as I am."—Geo. Kendall, Allston, Boston, Mass.

Columbus Advocate, Texas, April 21, 1883. Dear Editor:—I have tried your Hop Bitters, and find they are good for any complaint. The best medicine I ever used in my family.

OLDEST SOCIETY ON EARTH.

A Vegetarian Professor's Humorous Speech—Changes Going on in the World.

[Chicago Times.]

The Vegetarian society of Great Britain appears to be making excellent progress. At its last annual meeting, recently held in London, a large number of distinguished men and women were present and took part in the proceedings. The president, Professor Mayor, of Cambridge university, delivered a humorous and highly instructive speech. He stated that the order of vegetarians was not only the oldest of any on earth, but that it was the most extensive.

It had its origin in Eden. The eminent ancient Peruvians and Mexicans were all members of it. A majority of the people of India, China, and Japan are vegetarians. Among the old time vegetarians were Pythagoras, Zeno, Socrates, Epicurus, Seneca, and Plutarch. The Roman porridge eaters, the Persians of Cyrus, the Greeks of Leonidas, the Swedes of Gustavus Vasa, the miners of Chili, and the Hud on bay trappers ate scarcely anything but vegetables, endured privation, withstood hardships, and gained the admiration of the world. Converts were being made from all classes. Men of wealth, who had stuffed themselves with roast beef and puddings abounding in animal fat till they were laid up with the gout, were forced to confine themselves to a vegetable diet, when they usually regained their health. People who could not obtain money to procure meat were obliged to live on vegetables. In the majority of cases they were soon satisfied with the change.

The speaker referred to Professor Beketoff, rector of St. Petersburg university, who declared that the future is with the vegetarians. The reason was plain. Ten vegetarians could live where a single meat-eater would starve. The time was soon coming when the population of many countries could not be supported if any considerable portion of the land was devoted to raising animals for food. Animal substances were fast becoming displaced by those made of minerals or vegetables. Tallow was only kept partly for the purpose of supplying large quills for making pens. The metal pen has driven out that made from a quill. Not long ago, millions of skins were wanted every year for making parchment. Paper made of vegetables has superseded parchment for almost all purposes. Gutta percha and india rubber were fast taking the place of leather. Feathers are no longer necessary for filling beds. Cushions are made without bristles, and the best brushes are made from other materials than horn.

Tallow was no longer needed for making candles. A much better article could be manufactured from paraffine. Animal and fish oils were not employed for filling lamps. Kerosene has taken their place. The streets and buildings were now lighted by gas made from coal, gas, electricity, or mineral oil would furnish the light of the future. Butter is giving place to fruit jam and vegetable oils. Vegetable substances are finding their way into cheese. Even animal power was being superseded. Horses made of iron and drawn by steam were transporting most of the passengers and goods in all civilized countries. Gas, wind, water, steam, and the tides were being called into the service of man. Even the saddle-horse was fast being displaced by the bicycle and tricycle. Cheap and rapid transportation has rendered it easy to bring the vegetable products of one country to another. Horticulture is making most rapid progress everywhere. The art of preserving vegetables was being brought to a state of perfection.

READING ALOUD.

An Old-Fashioned Custom Which Is Conducive to a Closer Family Union.

[Nineteenth Century.]

If you ask eight people out of ten now, they will tell you that they hate being read to. And why? Because from their childhood they have been unused to it, or used only to such a monotonous form as robbed even the "Arabian Nights" of half their charm. The husband at the end of a hard day's work returns home to pass the evening absorbed in his book, or dozing over the fire, while the wife takes up her novel, or knits in silence. If he reads to her, or if she could be induced by reading to him, there would be community of thought, interchange of ideas and such discussion as the two could bring into any common channel cannot fail to produce.

And it is often the same when the circle is wider. I have known a large family pass hours between dinner and bedtime each one with his book, or work, afraid to speak above his breath, because it would disturb papa. It is that book, oil, or wine, or ill—a home—to which that disposition in a household when the word can neither give nor take away. I cannot blame them, for they all read a monotone, and it is enough to have endured the infliction of family prayers given in that dreary style from the family to be the listening to such a delivery for any length of time would exasperate our nerves' endurance.

But it was not always so. In the last century, even as late as sixty years ago, reading aloud was regarded as an accomplishment worthy the cultivation of those especially who had pretensions to taste, and in the country, with pretensions to taste, and it was, perhaps, far more frequently found than in the domestic circle. There were fewer books, fewer means of locomotion, fewer pleasures of winter nights outside the four walls of the country parlor. The game of cribbage, or the sonata on the spinet, did not occupy the entire evening after 6 o'clock dinner, and Shakespeare and Milton were more familiar to the young generation of those days than they are now mainly, I feel persuaded, because they were accustomed to hear them read aloud. The ear, habituated to listen, is often a more safe conduit to the memory in youth than the inattentive eye which rapidly skims a page.

Air and Sea as Earth Shakers.

[Arkansaw Traveler.]

The simultaneous occurrence of earthquakes and hurricanes in Spain and its neighborhood has led Mr. R. A. Proctor to make some interesting calculations. A change of half an inch in the barometer over an area of 160,000 square miles—about equal to that of the British Isles with the contained seas—would mean a variation of some 42,000 million tons in the weight of the air resting on that surface; one foot of extra tide extending outward ten miles would give an extra weight of 750 million tons on a coast 100 miles long. Greater variations of barometric pressure occur, over much larger areas, and tides sometimes reach several feet beyond their usual limits, on much greater lengths of coast.

"I take it, then," Mr. Proctor concludes, "that we may fairly consider that the external action exerted on the earth's crust, as the tidal wave sweeps upon a shore line, as winds heap up the seas there, and as atmospheric pressure increases and diminishes especially during the progress of great storms—must play a most important part in producing subterranean disturbances. At every moment of time millions and millions of tons of matter, in the form of water and air, are being flung hither and thither over the surface of the earth. Can we wonder if, apart from interior causes of disturbance, the crust shows signs of occasional fluctuation?"

Ancient Customs in France.

[Chicago Times.]

Anciently, in many parts of France, when a sale of land took place, it was the custom to have twelve adult witnesses, accompanied by twelve little boys, and when the price of the land was paid, and its surrender took place, the ears of the boys were pulled and they were severely beaten, so that the pain thus inflicted should make an impression upon their memory, and, if required afterward, they might bear witness to the sale. Later, when a criminal was being executed, parents whipped their children, so that they might take warning by the example, and keep in the path of virtue.

O. Langell's Asthma and Catarrh Remedy.

Having struggled 20 years between life and death with ASTHMA or PHTHISIC, treated by eminent physicians, and receiving no benefit, I was compelled, during the last five years of my illness to sit on my chair day and night gasping for breath; my sufferings were beyond description. In despair I experimented on myself by compounding roots and herbs and inhaling the medicine thus obtained. I fortunately discovered this WONDERFUL CURE for ASTHMA and CATARRH, warranted to relieve the most stubborn case of ASTHMA IN FIVE MINUTES, so that the patient can lie down to rest and sleep comfortably. Any person not fully satisfied after using one-third of a box can return the remainder to the proprietor and the money will be refunded. Send for trial package FREE OF CHARGE. Mrs. W. T. Brown, Monroe, Texas writes: "I suffered with Asthma 31 years. Your trial remedy completely relieved me. I wish all sufferers could know of it." Publish this for the benefit of the afflicted." Should your druggist not keep the remedy, I can send it by mail on receipt of price $1.00. For sale by all druggists. Address D. LANGELL, Apple Creek, Ohio.
